

Lagunitas Creek Bridge

Point Reyes Station, California

Photos: Nan Jackson
August, 05 2014

Point Reyes Station, California, forty miles north of San Francisco (google maps)

Lagunitas Creek, California's largest spawning runs of Coho salmon.

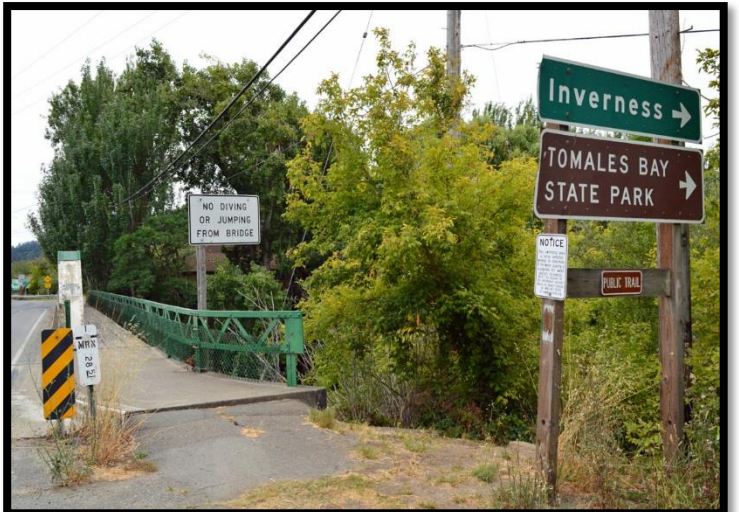

Lagunitas Creek Bridge, a riveted warren pony truss fabricated in 1929

Lagunitas Creek Bridge, on California's renowned Hwy 1.

Lagunitas Creek Bridge pedestrian walkway

Lagunitas Creek Bridge near Sir Francis Drake Blvd, leading to Inverness and Tomales Bay State Park.

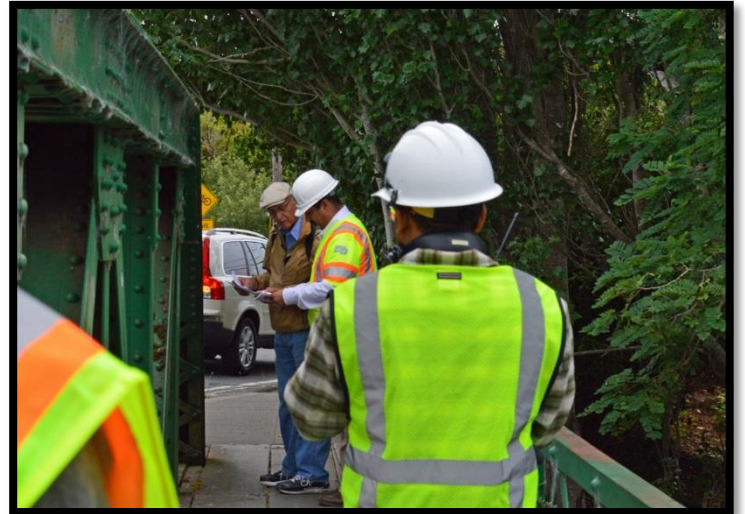

Rivets and bolts, a scientific fact

A craftsman's record

Vern Mesler; Muthanna Omran P.C. Senior Bridge Engineer, Caltrans; and Noray-Ann Spradling, Environmental Planner, Caltrans

Vern Mesler and Muthanna Omran inspecting the riveted connections on the Lagunitas Creek Bridge

Traffic on the Lagunitas Creek Bridge

Other traffic on the Lagunitas Creek Bridge